Ain't No Mountain High Enough

To keep me from you!

By: Lisa Cureton

I traveled to the mile-high city to attend a conference, and I dare not leave the city without stopping by the Denver Seminary Campus, located in Littleton, CO. Little did I know that this quick visit would confirm for me, just how much we (the Washington, DC campus) mean to the staff and faculty of Denver Seminary.

My visit started with a sweet hello from Pam, as I walked away from my Lyft, texting Professor Flanders with one hand and struggling with luggage in the other, a voice called out - "let me help you." I couldn't have known that that small voice, would set the tone for the day.

My then, TM500 Mentor and now Personal Mentor Professor Laura Flanders swept in and we began our tour of the campus. At every turn, I met staff members that were eager to know that things were going well at the DC campus and time and time again, as I said my "nice to meet you's," I found a hand extended, saying please call if you need anything. We are here to support you and Debora in fulfilling your call to serve.

Up to this point, my courses have been on-line, and as such, I've had plenty of opportunities to interact with tech for emergency support. Imagine my sheer happiness, to meet Shaun Truman in person. He has been an absolute gem to me. The campus is idyllic and serene; a beautiful space to encounter God. There are too many experiences to share, but of particular note was my visit to the former Provost Veron C. Ground's Reading Room, filled with books from his personal library and viewing the Holy Scriptures, written in Hebrew, which is read from daily. I am thankful to have had the opportunity to visit our campus.
